Dear Mr. Powell:

Comparative Aesthetics: A Workbook

Thank you for your letter of March 1 and accompanying materials. Unfortunately, general economic conditions and the sharp increase in the number of worthy manuscripts being offered us these days make it impossible for us to examine more than a handful of the many manuscripts that come to our attention. Although this looks like a worthy project, I regret to say that it does not appear suitable for us.

We appreciate your thinking of Cornell University Press.

With best wishes.

Sincerely,

Daniel R. Snodderly
